Administering Your Company's 401(k) Plan

Your 401(k) plan document identifies how your plan works and what special features it offers to help you customize it to your business needs. As an administrator, you'll want to ensure these documents reflect your business's current 401(k) needs and goals.

Step 1 – Review Your 401(k) Plan Documents

Company Information

- Is your basic company contact information accurate and up to date?
- Does your plan reflect your current company ownership?

Eligibility – The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) dictates that employees who are over 21 years of age and have at least one year of service are eligible to participate in their employer-sponsored retirement plan. However, you might have slightly different rules of eligibility in place for your plan.

- Does your plan clearly state when employees are eligible to participate?
- Are there any exceptions or special rules in place concerning eligibility? If so, list details:

Enrollment Period – Most plans have a set period of time when newly eligible employees can be added to the plan and current participants can make changes to their retirement benefits.

- Does the plan state if you have an annual, semi-annual, quarterly, or monthly enrollment period for eligible employees?

_____ Annual _____ Semi-annual _____ Quarterly _____ Monthly

- Are there specifications for exceptions or unique enrollment situations? If so, list:

Pro Tip: The Adoption Agreement is the part of the Plan Document that contains the specific features and options of your plan.

If you are overwhelmed by the Plan Document, try checking the Adoption Agreement.

Pro Tip: The employer contribution formula for your plan can be changed or updated to reflect the growing needs of your company.

This can be done through the third party administrator with a simple plan amendment.

Employee Contributions – Your plan should outline how employees add money to their 401(k). Elective deferrals are the most common type of employee contribution, but make sure other contribution types (e.g., Roth, After Tax) are clearly defined.

List ways employees can add money to their accounts below:

Employer Contributions – With a traditional 401(k) plan, employers have the option to include an employer match.

Does the plan specify how much the employer will match? List details:

Does the plan document explain when the match will occur? List timeframes:

Does it detail any requirements or exceptions for employer matches? List details:

Does the formula meet your business goals with the retirement plan?

Vesting Schedules – If you’ve chosen a traditional 401(k) plan, your plan document will include the vesting schedule you’ve decided upon.

Does your plan state the amount of time an employee must wait before they completely own any employer contributions you’ve made to their account? How long:

Are you vesting employees too soon or too late to maximize your chances of retaining the best talent?

Named Fiduciaries – A 401(k) “named fiduciary” is an individual or entity who manages an employer-sponsored retirement plan.

List the person or group acting as the fiduciary for your plan here:

Step 2 – Update your Employee Census

An employee census contains information about participants in your business's 401(k) plan that is shared with your 401(k) service provider (Record-keeper or Third-Party Administrator (TPA)).

This information lets your 401(k) service provider give your participants access to a secure online experience for contributions, account management, and other 401(k) features. The census is also critical for accuracy when completing required annual compliance tests and the annual Form 5500.

This information can change frequently, so you'll need to update your census records regularly or rely on a TPA or payroll provider to do it for you.

CENSUS DATA

Your census should contain the following details for each participant.

Personal

- Name
- Date of birth
- Social security number
- Home address
- Email address

Employment

- Start date
- Employment status
- Termination date
- Eligibility date
- Base salary (gross compensation)
- Eligible salary (see plan document)
- Hours worked
- Designation of ownership percentage

Contribution

- Employee deferral amounts
- Employer contribution amounts

Step 3 – Manage Employee Contributions and Loan Repayments

Your service provider can help you with managing employee contributions and setting up 401(k) loans as an optional benefit. But there are a few things to keep in mind:

- Are contributions being collected in a timely manner and in accurate amounts?
- Are those contributions being forwarded to your service provider and being invested?
- If you offer 401(k) loans, are repayments being collected, forwarded, and invested?
Collect employee contributions and loan repayments
- Are you aware of the funding deadlines that kick in when you withhold any amount from a participant's check?

Step 4 – File Form 5500

Form 5500 is an informational report you're required to file with the Department of Labor that contains details about your retirement plans.

Keep in mind that there are different versions of this form you can use depending on the size of your company and plan type. Many 401(k) service providers will prepare, sign, and even file a Form 5500 for you. Check with your service provider prior to beginning the filing process. To get started on Form 5500, you'll need to provide or verify the following information:

- Name of plan
- Company name, address, phone number, and EIN
- Plan administrator name (this is the signer)
- Participant census information
- Information about any plan pension or welfare benefits

Pro Tip: Check out our website for a step-by-step guide on how to file Form 5500.

Step 5 – Complete Annual 401(k) Compliance Tests

Many (but not all) 401(k) retirement plans must go through compliance testing each year to make sure they're in line with rules and regulations from the U.S. Department of Labor and the IRS.

These rules make sure employers contribute the right amount of money needed for all eligible employees. It also ensures that no one is contributing more than they're allowed, and that plans aren't discriminating against certain classes of employees.

BEST PRACTICES FOR COMPLIANCE TESTING

- Maintain accurate census data throughout the year
- Ensure you follow any required compliance dates or milestones throughout the year
- Review test results in detail with your 401(k) service provider
- Make a plan for the upcoming year to address any corrective action and prepare for successful tests in the future
- Perform a mid-year test to forecast future test results
